FIVE DROWNED IN THE HUDSON

MAN DRAGS DOWN LIFESAVER WHO SWAM TO HIS AID.

Four Deaths Due to the Folly of Those who Couldn't Swim-Boy Falls Between Barges Man Jumps From Bridge and Breaks His Neck-Fatal Case of Cramp.

A number of persons lost their lives in the waters adjacent to this city yesterday, and the lifesavers say that in all their experience they never saw so many people venturing into deep water who were unable to care for themselves. Among those drowned was a lifesaver who was trying to rescue a rash lad. Five persons lost their lives in the Hudson River. The first to be drowned there was James Childsworth, 16 years old, of 510 West 124th street. He went in bathing off West 124th street with Timothy Boylan of 335 East 124th street and Charles Simmons of 2313 Third avenue, two of his chums. Childsworth could not swim and his companions volunteered to teach him.

They showed him various strokes and explained to him how to keep his legs and arms in motion. Childsworth finally struck out for himself. The moment he got beyond his depth he was in trouble. He cried out to his companions, and they hastened to his aid. Before they got within twenty feet of him. Childs worth disappeared.

Boylan and Simmons waited a few seconds for Childsworth to bob up to the surface and when he didn't they dived for him. They could not find him, and after waiting around in the water for awhile they concluded he was drowned. They informed Policeman Shane and hurried to their chum's home to break the news to his parents. The body was not recovered.

About the time Childsworth lost his life, Norman Flammer, 16 years old, of 112 East 111th street, was having a death struggle with Life Saver John Smith, who was employed by the Washington Heights Baths at the foot of West 155th street.

Flammer went in swimming at the Audubon Beach baths at the foot of West 152d street. He wasn't a very good swimmer and after being in the water for a time be concluded he would call on a friend he knew at the Washington Heights Baths. In his bathing suit he walked along the railroad tracks to the Washington Heights baths. He did not see the friend he expected to meet but he swam out to a float. He remained on the float for a short time watching the other bathers when he decided he would take another dip. The float was the farthest out in the river and not very far from the channel, which is between twenty-five and thirty feet deep. When Flammer dropped from the float he made for the channel.

Life Saver Smith yelled to him to get into shallower water, seeing with his experienced eyes that Flammer was not an expert swimmer. If Flammer had any intenion of obeying he was in trouble before he could do so. Spectators think he was seized with a cramp. He went down and Smith swam to his aid.

Smith swam to his aid.

The life saver brought Flammer to the surface with a grip on his hair. Flammer was so scared that he grasped Smith by the throat with both hands. Smith tried to shake the young man off, but he could not even cry out for help he was held so tight. In struggling to free himself Smith was dragged under water.

They came up again, with Flammer still holding on to Smith's throat like grim death. Flammer was unconscious then, or nearly so, and Smith exhausted. Smith made one more futile attempt to shake off

John Peterson lives in the same house and resterday he took Carlson out to teach him is a good swimmer.

He showed Carlson the rudiments of the art and kept swimming alongside of him for a little while. Then Carlson expressed the desire to be allowed to swim alone. He was an apt pupil and he started out

"Keep in the shallow water and you'll be all right." Peterson yelled, as Carlson started off on his own hook. Carlson did not follow instructions. He was soon in deep water. Before Peterson could get to him he was drowned. Nine-year-old Bernard Goldstein of 321 West Twenty-fifth street was playing tag in the evening at the foot of West Nineteenth street, where a number of mud scows are moored. The boys were jumping from one to another. In making a jump Bernard fell between two of the scows and disappeared in the water. His body was found some time later by Timothy D. Sullivan of 48 West Nineteenth street. It was re-moved to the West Twentieth street police station and later claimed by his parents.

Michael Dolan of West Fifty-third stree Manhattan, the house number not being known, was drowned at New Dorp Beach Richmond, yesterday afternoon. His bod was recovered at low water last night He was at New Dorp on an outing with the New York Steam Heaters' Association. After dinner he went in bathing and was eized with a cramp.
Albert Pugh, 42 years old, of 114 Four-teenth street. Brooklyn, dived off a small boat under the Harway avenue draw-bridge at Coney Island Creek yesterday afternoon, striking his head on the bottom of the creek and breaking his neck. He was dead when he came to the surface.

Pugh was a plumber and had determined to spend the day fishing and bathing in the creek. The water at the place where he dived is only about four feet deep at low tide and the bottom is hard sand.

WANT TO LIVE IN TEXAS? Six Million Acres for Sale at $1 an Acre,

With Time to Pay. AUSTIN, Tex., July 16 .- J. J. Terrell, State Land Commissioner, is receiving 2,000 letters a day from persons who desire information in regard to the sale of the according acres of State lands which are to be placed upon the market on Sept. 1. These inquiries come from homeseekers in all parts of the United States and Canada. Thousands of them are from people living in the New England and Eastern States.

Commissioner Terrall has had a list of the lands which are to be sold printed in pamphlet form, showing the number of each section and the county in which it is located. He has also prepared an interesting descriptive account of these lands, together with full details of what steps are necessary for the prospective purchaser to take to acquire a homestead.

The fact that the minimum purchase price is $1 an acre and that the purchase price is so an acre and that the purchase price may be paid in forty annual instalments, with a per cent, interest, makes it an attractive bargain for thousands of poor persons who are seeking comfortable homes. Commissioner Terrell warns the prospective purchaser against land agents. He says that he will not consider applications to purchase that come through land agents. Full information in regard to these lands will be given by Commissioner Terrell free of charge to all who apply to him for it.

BOSTON'S BANK SCANDAL.

Stockholders Very Bitter Toward the Cen tral Directors.

Boston, July 16 .- Reports indicate that sensational disclosures will be made when the suit of Receiver Allen of the defunct Central National Bank against its directors comes up in court next fall. Stockholders are incensed over what they declare to be gross and criminal negligence on the part of the bank's officials, and one of them, Charles H. Dean, a lawyer, of West Medway, declares that he believed the bank to have been "a swindle almost from the start" and gave it as his opinion, judging from experience and the charges made by Receiver Allen, that when the matter comes up for hearing the evidence "will point up for hearing the evidence "will point toward criminal proceedings."

Mr. Dean holds fifty-five shares of the stock of the bank. He is very bitter against the directors. "The thing was rotten all through," said he. "The directors knew well the condition of the bank's finances, knew well that much of the paper held by it was worthless, that its surplus was wiped out and its capital impaired, and yet in the face of all this they persisted in declaring dividends and put the stock on the market at a figure far beyond its real value."

There will be no criminal action taken for the reason that the offenses which Mr.

SENATOR MITCHELL'S CASE.

Might Have Been Sentenced if He Had Been in Court on Saturday.

PORTLAND, Ore., July 16.—Senator John H. Mitchell was not in court when Judge De Haven yesterday refused to grant a new trial to him. Senator Mitchell was represented by Judge Bennett and ex-Senator Thurston, and while Judge De Haven did not say that he would have sentenced the Senator had he been in court, it is believed, from the fact that he asked whether the defendant was in court, that he would have done so. When Judge De Haven put his question Senator Thurston rose and said that he wished further time in which to draw up a bill of exceptions, and he was allowed until a week from Monday morning to present them.

This means another ten days before Senator Mitchell will have judgment pronounced upon him.

SENATOR CLARK ALL RIGHT. ALIVE WITH A BROKEN NECK.

OPERATION WAS NOT SO SEVERE AS A FORMER ONE.

Took Only 35 Minutes, but 40 Were Reguffed to Anesthetize the Patient-He Cables to His Wife That He Will Sail in a Week to Join Her inFrance.

Senator William A. Clark of Montana, who underwent an operation for mastoiditis on Saturday afternoon, rested well that night and passed a comfortable day yesterday. The anesthetics left no ill effects, the patient assimilated nourishment readily and altogether the surgeons, Dr. James F. McKernon of 62 West Fifty-second street and Dr. Lewis R. Morris of 60 West Fiftyeighth street, the Senator's son-in law, were confident that the operation had been entirely successful and that there was no doubt of a speedy recovery.

In December, 1903, Dr. Morris explained, the Senator underwent a much more serious operation upon the same ear for the same disease. At that time the supporation had penetrated rather deeply into the mastoid bone. Whether the present illness was a recurrence or an entirely newdevelopment is a matter of surmise, but at any rate not much diseased bone was discovered this time and only a little was scraped

The most remarkable feature of the case was the difficulty in getting the patient under the influence of anesthetics. First, gas was used, then chloroform, and as a last resort ether. All this took forty minutes. The operation itself lasted thirty-five minutes. and great care was taken to remove all the poisonous matter. The Senator regained consciousness three hours after the opera-

Norwegian Farmhand Suffers Three Weeks and Seems to Be Improving.

GREENWICH, Conn., July 16 .- The case of Christopher Jensen, a Norwegian farmhand of New Canaan, undergoing treat ment at the Stamford Hospital, is said by the hospital surgeons to be one of the most remarkable on record. For three weeks he has been suffering with a broken neck and his condition is so comfortable that the surgeons hesitate to operate. They have summoned Dr. Dawbarn of the Polyclinic Hospital, New York, for consultation, and to-morrow they will decide whether it is better to trust to nature heal the broken bone or to operate. Jensen is about 50 years old and has been a laborer all his life. His muscles are hard as iron and he is in good.condition physically, although not of a build that would attract attention. Three weeks ago he fell from a load of gravel near the farmhouse of J. L. Davenport, his employer, and broke his neck. The exact nature of the injury could not be diagnosed at the time, because of the effect of liquor Jensen had drunk. Dr. Scoville attended

Jensen suffered so much that he became violent and on two occasions he left his bed and went about the farm, threatening bed and went about the farm, threatening the people. Once he remained out in the open all night. He craved constantly for liquor and his fellow employees kept him supplied. Not until four days ago did the attending physician notice symptoms of a broken neck. As soon as he did he had Jensen sent to the Stamford Hospital, where a careful diagnosis was made and it was found that some of the small bones in the neck were broken.

Dr. Tiffany, house surgeon in charge, said to-night it was most extraordinary that Jensen could live with an injury of the kind. Jensen seems to be improving all the time and because of this apparent improvement the surgeons hesitate to operate on him, for fear that it may do him more harm than good. Unless Dr. Dawbarn advises to the contrary, it is likely that the surgeons will allow nature to take her course.

Lentz paid no attention to looks from the women and kept his feet on the seat in front of him. At Wendover avenue, The Bronx, several women got on. of them carrying a baby asked Lentz to remove his feet and give her a seat.

He didn't answer. When she asked him again he said he wouldn't. She complained to the guard, Dan Sullivan. "Take your feet off that seat," said Sullivan. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself, and you a man."

"I'll lick you if you butt in," said Lentz. "I'm a scrapper, I am. My business is prize fighting. You'd better not get gay." The guard grabbed Lentz's feet and shoved them off the seat. Lentz caught him by the throat. Sullivan yelled for help, and Guard William Davis ran to his assistance. Then Lentz's three friends got into the fight and it was rough and tumble all over the car, women screaming and trying to get out of the way, Lentz choking Sullivan and the others smashing at each other with fists and canes. With the whistle going the train pulled into the station at 174th street. There wasn't a policeman about and the train waited there five minutes with the gates closed. The passengers in the car fled and left it to the guards, four of them by that time, and Lentz's forces. Finally the motorman pulled out and ran to the 177th street station, where Policeman May of the Tremont avenue station was waiting. May leaped over the gate and pranced into the fight.

One of the scrappers met him with a smash in the nose that brought the blood and another caught him in the solar plexus. May pulled his club and hammered right and left. He says that if any of the passengers had had nerve enough to help him he would have collared the whole outfit. They were not paying nickels for a chance to fight, and he fought alone. Lentz's three friends scrambled over the gates and got away.

May held to Lentz and got him to the police station after a tussle. Sullivan was in pretty bad shape. Lentz had choked him until his neck was black and blue and he was weak and sick. Davis' blue and he was weak and sick. Davis's face was beaten up considerably and May looked as if he had been in a real fight.

At the station Lentz said he was a pugilist and lived at 116 West Ninetieth street. The guards went to the station house, accompanied by half a dozen women who had seen the whole thing. CANDY FOR A MADMAN.

It Keeps Him Quiet Until the Police Arrive -Ate More'n & Pound. GREENWICH, Conn., July 16 .- Pacifying him with candy, a number of alarmed Glenb: ook citizens held Purcell Miller, a violently insane young man, who says he belongs in Merchantville, N. J., late last night until the Stamford police arrived and arrested him.

Miller appeared in the village early in the evening, entered a house on the premises of Elmer E. Scofield and amused himself by Elmer E. Scofield and amused himself by lighting and extinguishing lamps and throwing things about. Then he went into Stanley Ruske's house and demolished all the crockery in sight. A posse of citizens was formed and pursued Miller. They caught him and led him captive to Edward Ferris's country store. Here he became violent, demanding candy and cake. Mr. Ferris handed him a piece of candy and he ate it with all the pleasure of a child. He cried for more and the posse kept feeding him candy until the police arrived with the patrol wagon. Officers Higland and Button had trouble getting him away from the candy. He had eaten more than a pound.
